Firm names Scott Winslow as first non-U.S. managing partner

CHICAGO, April 9, 2007 – Family Office Exchange (FOX) today announced the appointment of Scott Winslow as its first managing partner to be based outside the United States. He will work from FOX's office at 14 Waterloo Place in London.

Winslow comes to FOX from Datamonitor, a London-based market research and consulting firm. As managing director of financial services, he was responsible for all aspects of the firm's global financial services research practice, which provides research reports, briefs, custom research and consulting to banks, insurance companies and other financial services companies.

There, he set the strategic direction of Datamonitor's financial services business, identifying and launching new products and services and forging alliances with strategic business partners.

Previously, Winslow served as managing director of the Business Banking Board and Operations Council of the Corporate Executive Board, a Washington D.C.-based firm that serves as a best practices research advisor to leading financial organizations worldwide. There, he oversaw the practices focused on the strategy and marketing of corporate banking services by financial services firms as well as the management and oversight of financial services operations.

Winslow also has held research-related positions at SNL Securities, Advisory Board Co. and First Commerce Corp.

He has a bachelor's degree in economics and foreign affairs from the University of Virginia and a master's degree in business administration from Tulane University.

"Scott's knowledge and experience abroad make him an outstanding addition to our team," says John Benevides, president of FOX. "I have the utmost confidence in his ability to deliver even more value to our international members and to help us expand our presence in Europe and beyond."
