Sara Hamilton, CEO, Family Office Exchange Named to List of Top 50 Women in Wealth Management

CHICAGO, April 30, 2009 – Family Office Exchange (FOX), announced today that its Founder and CEO, Sara Hamilton was recognized as one of Wealth Manager's Top 50 Women in Wealth Management – a list that honors the top 50 women for their influence, leadership and achievement in wealth management. FOX is a global provider of education, best practices and networking services to private wealth owners, family office executives and wealth advisors.

This honor comes at a time when FOX also celebrates its 20-year anniversary of providing member education, shared knowledge and thought leadership across a sophisticated global network of financial families in 22 countries.

According to Wealth Manager magazine, selection of the Top 50 women looked at leaders, the mentors, the partners and the most powerful. “Women have a great deal to offer wealth managers, and clients realize and appreciate this. It’s very exciting to watch as more and more women take on senior roles in the industry, making important contributions both in advisory and money management roles and managing firms,” says Wealth Manager Editor in Chief, Kathleen McBride.

A complete list of all 50 women can be found at <http://www.parsintl.com/18745.pdf>.

In 1989, Sara Hamilton identified the need for a peer network for families with multi-generational wealth who wanted guidance to effectively pass on to future generations. Hamilton also recognized the need for an industry advocate to train wealth owners and family office staff and share best practices among professionals. Today, the firm provides extensive insight into a variety of topics that help the wealth management community more effectively manage their wealth, from how to evaluate risk and adjust financial strategies in today’s economic environment, to how to prepare next generations for the responsibility of ownership.
